

Mexican Slang Guide

Learn Mexican Spanish

@SpeakBetterSpanish

www.speakbetterspanish.com

SPEAK
BETTER
SPANISH

Everyday Mexican Slang: Your New Linguistic BFFs

Alright, güey, let's kick things off with some slang you'll hear on the daily in Mexico. These words are your ticket to sounding like a true local, so pay attention!

1 Güey

This is the Swiss Army knife of Mexican slang. Use it like "dude" or "man" in English. "¿Qué onda, güey?" is your go-to casual greeting. Just be careful - it can be friendly or insulting depending on your tone!

2 Chido/a

When something's awesome, it's chido. That taco you just devoured? Chido. The sunset over the beach? Super chido. It's the "cool" of Mexican Spanish.

3 Qué onda?

This is your "What's up?" in Mexican slang. Use it liberally when greeting friends or striking up a conversation with that cute local at the bar.

4 Órale

The chameleon of Mexican expressions. It can mean "Wow!", "Okay!", or "Let's go!" depending on the context. Master this, and you're halfway to slang fluency.

Remember, using these phrases is all about context and confidence. Don't be afraid to throw them out there - Mexicans love it when foreigners try to use their slang!

SPEAK
BETTER
SPANISH

From Flirty to Frustrated: Multi-Purpose Mexican Expressions

Now that you've got the basics down, let's level up with some expressions that pack a punch. These phrases can mean different things depending on how you use them, so listen up!

No manches

This versatile phrase can express disbelief, surprise, or even mild outrage. Think of it as the Mexican version of "No way!" or "You're kidding me!" Use it when your friend tells you they ate 20 tacos in one sitting, or when you see the breathtaking view from the top of a pyramid.

Aguas

Literally meaning "waters," this word is used to warn someone to be careful. It's like shouting "Watch out!" when you see your friend about to step in a puddle or walk into a low-hanging piñata. It's a quick, effective way to get someone's attention in a potentially dicey situation.

Vale madre

This is your go-to phrase for when things go south. It can mean "I don't care," "It's worthless," or "Forget it," depending on the context. Just be warned - it's a bit on the vulgar side, so maybe don't use it around your Mexican grandmother!

And now, for a dash of romance! If you're looking to add some Mexican flavor to your flirting game, try these on for size:

- "Mi amor," "mi vida," and "mi cielo" are sweet terms of endearment.
- "Coquetear" means "to flirt," so if someone tells you "Estás coqueteando," you're doing it right!
- "Echarle ganas" usually means "give it your best," but in a flirty context, it could be a playful challenge.

SPEAK
BETTER
SPANISH

¡Vámonos! Wrapping Up Your Mexican Slang Adventure

You're almost a Mexican slang master, güey! Let's wrap things up with some fun expressions for emphasis and some essential parting words.

Super Emphasis

When "very" just isn't enough, reach for "súper" or "muy cañón." Something isn't just good, it's "súper chido." A situation isn't just intense, it's "muy cañón."

Hasta la madre

When you're completely fed up, you're "hasta la madre." Use this when you've had enough of something - like studying slang, perhaps?

Parting Words

Say goodbye like a local with "Nos vemos" (See you later) or "Cuídate" (Take care). And remember, "Sale" is your quick and easy "Okay" or "Sounds good."

And there you have it, amigos! You're now armed with enough Mexican slang to impress locals, make friends, and maybe even find romance. Remember, the key to mastering slang is practice, so don't be shy about using these phrases. Mexicans are usually delighted when foreigners try out their colloquialisms.

So, the next time you're in Mexico, or chatting with your Mexican friends, throw in a casual "Qué onda, güey?" or exclaim "¡Qué chido!" when you taste some amazing street tacos. You'll be surprised at how quickly you'll connect with people and how much fun you'll have exploring this rich, expressive language.

¡Nos vemos, y échale ganas to your Spanish learning journey!

SPEAK
BETTER
SPANISH